your screen, if it mentions what type of IP address it's got, then that will be the IP address that your laptop will use. Note that if you have several computers on your network, the computer you use to access the Internet must be the one that has the right IP address, it's not possible for a computer that has an IP address in the 192.168.0.x range to access the internet on another computer. It means that the BIS settings are set to 0. There are two types of BIS: Bis-off: When Bis-off is set to ON, the BIS(Bonded Information Service) feature is turned off. This is the default setting. When Bis-off is set to OFF, the BIS feature is turned on. If your IP address is, for example: 192.168.0.2 and your computer has the IP address 192.168.0.4, then you will not be able to connect to the Internet. Your PC will be using the address 192.168.0.4. The computer connected to the Internet needs to have an IP address in the 192.168.0.x range. It cannot use an IP address within the 192.168.1.x range as it will not be able to access the Internet. On most routers the IP address range is specified by the default gateway which is usually 192.168.0.1.

However, if the router has more than one default gateway then 82157476af
